STOCK BREEDERS' ASSOCIATION PLAN MEETS APPROVAL

In connection with the suggested organization of a pure bred stock breeders' association in Rock county, Mr. C. A. Hanson, county agent, states that he is daily receiving requests for plans on pure bred stock from breeders throughout the west. This morning he received a communication from a buyer in Colorado relative to the purchase of two carloads of Rock county Shortbreds and Holsteins. As testimony of the way in which local breeders handle their sales, Mr. Hanson has received a letter from the buyers in Idaho who bought two carloads of stock here last fall. They say: "At no place have we ever received the courteous treatment and the highest grade of stock such as we received in Rock county."

The county agent strongly endorses the views of John J. Fisher, Dr. Wayne A. Gunn and J. J. McCann, local stock breeders, relative to the formation of an association to hold sales of pure bred stock in this city.

CHIMNEY FIRES ARE BECOMING POPULAR

About 7:30 p.m. last evening the department was called to the home of John Fleming, 518 Lincoln street. A chimney fire was the cause. Chemicals were used and the fire extinguished without the necessity of a fire engine. This morning shortly after seven o'clock the department responded to an alarm at the home of Harry Gifford, South Franklin street. Another chimney fire was burning. The loss was nominal.

LOOKING AROUND

Persons residing on South Main street paid no attention to the noise when the interurban struck the Janesville street car last evening. Several of them stated that they thought it was the car headed for the barns.

Night Captain Thomas Morrissey of the police is the oldest man both in years and in service on the department. This does not hinder Tom however from stepping out once in awhile and showing the young fellows how to bowl.

"Molsey" Dalton the idol of Janesville basketball fans is still in France but writes that he will be home soon and possibly in time for the game against the Detroit Y. M. C. Dalton also intimates that he would like to have had the opportunity of again tramping on the feet of "Barefoot" Adams.

Due to the council meeting last evening the various clubs throughout the city were deserted. Never before in the history of the council has such a crowd been present. And they certainly were fooled.

This one was told on Bob Hockett by a member of the police department. "The minute the 15 to 45 draft law was passed Bob grabbed a plow and started working his farm. He quit the day after the armistice was signed.

Alderman Thomas Welsh stated that he had agreed with Alderman Dulin that the people at the council meeting last evening should be treated to a little oratory. Thomas lived up to his recently acquired title as "Janesville's leading orator."

BEARMORE WILL ATTEND "Y" MEET AT CAMP GRANT

Secretary Bearmore, with two other local men, will go as yet been named, will go as delegates to the conference to be conducted at Camp Grant, February 5-9, under the auspices of the National War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A. Delegates from four states, Wisconsin, Illinois, Minnesota and Iowa will be in attendance at the meeting which promises to be instructive and helpful in local Y. M. C. A. work.

Twenty-five Wisconsin associations will be represented by three delegates each, making a total budget delegation of 75 men. The purpose of the conference, as stated by those in charge, is to prepare laymen to lead groups of returning soldiers, and relate them to the church or other agencies to the best of community betterment, and to plan together a united effort for the immediate tasks confronting them.

Secretary Bearmore expects to choose two local men within the next few days and announcement will be made of his selections.

COUNTY AGENT CAN GET ALFALFA SEED

Farmers who desire to obtain shipments of Grimm alfalfa seed may do so through County Agent R. E. Acheson. Mr. Acheson states that he will be able to secure a large quantity of the well known Idaho variety of the Grimm seed and is anxious to have farmers get their orders in now.

In 1918 this seed was used extensively in the county and reports received by the county agent show that it proved highly successful, producing great crops. Farmers are beginning to realize more each year the value of alfalfa and no doubt the acreage this year will be much greater than in 1918.

The Grimm variety is strongly recommended by Prof. L. A. Gruber of the university extension department and he is urging its use throughout the state.

INTERURBAN AND STREET CAR CRASH

Lester Robb, motorman of a Main street car of the Janesville Traction company, sustained severe cuts and bruises about his head and legs in a head-on collision between his car and an interurban car last evening. The interurban motorman escaped uninjured.

Mr. Robb stated that before he had fully taken the switch at Clark street, the interurban car, leaving the city and traveling at a fair rate of speed, crashed into the front end of his car and knocked him to the floor. The platform of the street car was demolished and the fender of the interurban torn off.

Two discharged soldiers from Camp Grant, Art Kelly and R. W. Moyer, arraigned in municipal court this morning for drunkenness were released by Judge Maxwell after paying costs and told to get out of town.

Otto Storm pleaded guilty to a drunkenness charge and was given a choice of $5 and costs or 15 days in the city jail. He was given the alternative of paying a fine of $10 and costs or spending 15 days as the guest of Sheriff Beley.

Cornell Snowden pleaded not guilty to the charge of vagrancy and his hearing was set for 4 o'clock this afternoon.

WITH FLYING COLORS AMERICANS MARCH THROUGH GERMANY

When the American soldiers started for Europe they had their hearts set on seeing Germany, but figured that they would have to fight their way into the country. It was easier than they expected. They marched into the fatherland unmolested after Germany had hoisted the white flag. The photo shows the color bearers of the Fifth artillery of the First American division passing through Hietzerath, Germany, on their way to the Rhine with colors flying.

PERSONAL PROPERTY "OFFSET" BILL MAY START FIREWORKS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., Jan. 28.—Assemblyman C. E. Hanson expects to open his fight before the assembly today in favor of his measure to repeal the personal property "offset." A similar bill was offered in the legislature last year by Senator Avellan, Beaver, Oshkosh, and it met with a storm of opposition from the big taxpayers of the state.

The Hanson bill, which comes up for hearing today provides for the repeal of the present law giving an "offset" to the income tax. He said in an interview that it would put approximately $3,000,000 annually into the coffers of the state, counties and cities of Wisconsin. In the seven years since the income tax law has been in force the "offsets" as the result of the personal property tax law have amounted to $12,000,000 while the cash collections have amounted to $10,000,000.

"The result of the passage of this bill would be to put the burden of taxation on those best able to pay," said Assemblyman C. E. Hanson today.

Morgan Metcalfe is Made Assistant "Y" Boys' Secretary

Morgan Metcalfe, local high school student, was today appointed assistant boys' secretary at the Y. M. C. A. by Boys' Work Secretary A. S. Phelps. In accepting the appointment, young Metcalfe is serving gratis, showing the genuine spirit of helpfulness toward the association by those in charge.

Mr. Phelps in his work, is striving to arouse a similar spirit among other boys and is meeting with great success.

SIBERIAN RAILWAY TAKES 80,000,000 RUBLES PER MONTH

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Omsk, Central Siberia, 15.—The trans-Siberian railway is losing $9,000,000 a month, according to Ivan Mikhaloff, minister of finance of the all Russian government here in discussing the government's program for financial rehabilitation with the Associated Press today.

Mr. Mikhaloff, who is but 29 years of age, supported the government's decision to accept the allied proposal for the management of the trans-Siberian railway.

He pointed out that the reorganization of the railway would be beneficial by increasing receipts. He said that Russia would furnish money to meet the running expenses of the work but the plans of John F. Stevens, head of the railroad commission, will entail the purchase abroad of a large amount of material. To make payments on such purchases, Russia, he said, would require a loan from allied nations.

Mr. Mikhaloff has a striking personality and his life history is interesting. His father, Adrian Mikhaloff, was banished from European Russia and was sentenced to hard labor in the gold mines of Kamchatka, near Chita, Trans-Baikalia, because of suspicion that he was involved in the plot which resulted in the assassination of Emperor Alexander II. The present minister of finance was born at Kamchatka. When he was two years old, his father was pardoned and returned to Russia.

Although wealthy, the elder Mikhaloff believed every man should typsetype. After becoming a printer, the young man entered the ministry of finance at Petrograd. He said that the present government has 250,000,000 rubles in bank notes and five billion rubles in gold and specie, as a basis for reconstruction of the country. He said that the monthly expenditures jumped from 157,000,000 rubles in August to 400,000,000 in December. The receipts in December were 75,000,000 rubles against 20,000,000 in August. Deficiencies are being met by the issuance of treasury bonds. The budget for 1919 called for 600,000,000 monthly to meet the expenses attendant upon enlarging the territory under control. He said that one billion million rubles would be appropriated for railroad work.

BOARD OF CONTROL MAY BE CUT IN SIZE FROM 5 TO 3 MEMBERS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., Jan. 28.—A reorganization of the state board of control may come as the result of a bill to be offered in the legislature this week cutting down the size of the board from five to three members and fixing the salary of the members at $5,000 annually. At the present time the president of the board of control gets a salary of $6,000 and the other members a salary of $2,500 each. The present members of the board are: President James O. Davidson, Laura Breese, Milwaukee; W. H. Gracbe, Milwaukee; George Harris, Waukesha; and Edward Everett, Eagle River.

The reorganized board of three members provides for two men and one woman. In the main this board is organized along the line of the industrial, tax and railroad commissions, which have three members each and whose powers and duties are definitely prescribed by statute. Two years ago a bill on the subject was offered, but it provided that all three members should be men and that a woman should be appointed in an auxiliary position. This bill was defeated. Gov. Philip Beltrami declared that a more efficient administration, "can be had with a smaller board, paid good salaries. This is one of the main administrative reforms which he will urge upon the members of the legislature."

The state board of control will hold a meeting this week to lay out its campaign for other legislation. The board is expected to approve the suggestion of Senator Claire B. Bird, Wausau, giving judges power to put offenders on probation. A report will be made to the governor late this week on the improvements needed at the different state institutions. It is recommending the completion of the women's reformatory at Taycheedah and the early opening of the home for the feeble minded at Union Grove. "What the report of the board will be on the large prison farm to be started in northern Wisconsin is not known. It is known, however, that some of the members do not look on the northern Wisconsin prison farm for the raising of crops as feasible."

PERSHING IS PRAISED FOR ABILITY AS COMMANDER

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Washington, Jan. 28.—Senator Wadsworth of New York, recently returned from a trip to France, spoke in the senate today in high praise of Gen. Pershing and the American fighting machine and in criticism of deficiencies in supplies and equipment provided for them.

"He had come to France to lick the Germans," the senator said of the American soldier. He suspected there were some people who doubted his ability to do so. He was determined to show them that he could—and he did."

Senator Wadsworth said positively some of the equipment and supply shortages were unavoidable, but others unquestionably were due to inefficiency and confusion in the war department during the early stages of the war.

300 TEACHERS FROM COUNTY TO ATTEND STATE ASSOCIATION

Over 300 teachers from city, village and rural schools throughout Rock county will attend the annual convention of the Southern Wisconsin Teachers' association to be held in Madison, March 7 and 8. As yet details of the two day program have not been completed, but announcement of a few of the speakers gives assurance to local teachers that the convention is going to be an excellent one. Prof. H. L. Miller is in charge of arrangements.

Some of the speakers secured are Dean Frank Graves of the University of Pennsylvania, President Burton of the University of Minnesota, and A. M. Hall of Indianapolis.

Gompers Wonders if "Labor Congress" is Hun Propaganda

Paris, Monday, Jan. 27.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American federation of labor, who is in Paris to discuss the organization of an "international labor congress" with French, Belgian and English syndicalists declared to France Libre, today, that he would not yet say whether the American delegation will attend the labor and socialist conference at Bern. He declared he wished to know if these organizations represented what he called labor organizations and if the Bern conference was not part of a direct German propaganda plan.

Farm Accounts and the Farm Calendar

The government income report is a mighty hard and inconvenient thing to make out unless you have at hand the data recording your purchases and expenditures during the twelve months past.

The Janesville Daily Gazette has for distribution, a calendar produced especially for farm accounts which is the simplest accounting system yet devised. An opportunity is given to enter under the date of the month you buy or sell or pay out or receive any money directly on the calendar pad, which totaled at the end of the month gives an exact record of all transactions. Anyone can make these entries and the records are then preserved there to the end of the year.

If you have made an income report to the government without some form of income record, you will wonder how difficult it was to answer questions intelligently. This calendar is unique and complete, is easily used and is designed especially for farm use. It will save more time and trouble than you ever dreamed of. There is no confusion or guess work and it helps you at a time when you most need it. This calendar is sent to anyone on receipt of 10c or is free with a year's subscription to the Daily Gazette.

BROWN CHARMEUSE RESTAURANT GOWN

Charming, indeed, is this frock of brown charmeuse and georgette. The skirt is gracefully draped in a rather novel fashion and the blouse is a still more novel adaptation of the chemise blouse. It is trimmed with iridescent beads in green and blue shades. Bead tassels weight the bell shaped sleeves.

BARLEY PROFITABLE
AS FEED CROP, STATE
FARM EXPERTS SHOW

With prospects of a "bone dry" nation, farmers of Rock County who have been growing barley for many years will be interested to know that it will be more profitable to them to use their barley for feed than to sell it for the breweries. According to the Wisconsin experiment station officials the barley feeding experiment just finished offers the best kind of assurance to the farmer that he can and still make more money.

While the feeding value of barley has been found lower than that of corn, it was found that the two grains were compared when hand-fed to pigs, it proved interesting to find barley greatly superior, say the men who conducted the experiment, E. B. Merriam and G. Bohstedt.

In the seven lots of pigs used, the barley feed lots showed the greatest financial returns and superior color and firmness of flesh to the corn feed lots.

The experiment and its results follow:

Seven lots of six pigs each weighing 123.5 pounds were carried on 240 pounds on seven different rations. Lot 1 was fed the standard corn and tankage. The cost per hundred pounds gain was $12.80.

Lot 2 was fed shelled corn and fish meal at a cost of $13.08 per hundredweight of grain. With a daily gain per pig of over 10 pounds in 10 weeks, the gain was $12.80.

Lot 3 was fed shelled corn and fish meal at a cost of $13.08 per hundredweight of grain. With a daily gain per pig of over 10 pounds in 10 weeks, the gain was $12.80.

Lot 4 was fed shelled corn and fish meal at a cost of $13.08 per hundredweight of grain. With a daily gain per pig of over 10 pounds in 10 weeks, the gain was $12.80.

Lot 5 was fed shelled corn and fish meal at a cost of $13.08 per hundredweight of grain. With a daily gain per pig of over 10 pounds in 10 weeks, the gain was $12.80.

Lot 6 was fed shelled corn and fish meal at a cost of $13.08 per hundredweight of grain. With a daily gain per pig of over 10 pounds in 10 weeks, the gain was $12.80.

Lot 7 was fed shelled corn and fish meal at a cost of $13.08 per hundredweight of grain. With a daily gain per pig of over 10 pounds in 10 weeks, the gain was $12.80.

Lot 8 was fed shelled corn and fish meal at a cost of $13.08 per hundredweight of grain. With a daily gain per pig of over 10 pounds in 10 weeks, the gain was $12.80.

Lot 9 was fed shelled corn and fish meal at a cost of $13.08 per hundredweight of grain. With a daily gain per pig of over 10 pounds in 10 weeks, the gain was $12.80.

HEARD FROM OUR SOLDIERS AND SAILORS

Private Russell G. Smiley.

"The German people are treating us royally," writes Russell G. Smiley, with the American Army of Occupation, stationed at Metz, Germany, to his father, Register of Deeds, E. P. Smiley of this city. He tells of the high value of soap in Germany and of many other incidents which are interesting. His letter follows:

Metz, Dec. 22, 1918.

"Here I am, not 20 minutes' walk from the Rhine river. Metz is a little village about a mile or so west of Coblenz. In fact it is practically a suburb of Coblenz. I don't think there are many from Janesville now from Rock county that are having the same experience that I am.

"Our little detachment left Rehon on the 15th and arrived in Coblenz on the night of the 16th, and came out to this little burg the next day. We had a fine time coming up—best accommodations I have had since I joined the army. Our car had a Pullman beat all hollow. Our bunks were double deckers—that is, one over the other. The big ones were double bunks, that is, two slept together. On the other side were singles. I slept with Bob. Towards the fellow from Rock county, who, by the way, is a marble topped one which the Germans left at Rehon.

"On the way up here we passed through some very fine country. We followed the Moselle river most of the way. We went through Longwy, Audon, Thionville (German name Diederichshofen), Treves, Kochem and Coblenz. The Moselle is beautiful. It runs between high mountains of almost solid rock, winding to and fro like a snake. It has a very steep descent which would make it valuable for power, although I did not see any dams along the way. The railway is cut from solid rock along the mountain sides, running through many tunnels, one of which they say is about 10 miles long. That amounts to about 5 miles in our measurement. We made the trip by moonlight along this river and it was a pretty sight, but I think I could have seen a great deal more by daylight.

"We had a cook car with us on the trip, too. I was assistant cook. We had everything from steaks to pancakes with delicious honey. We served meals that would cost at least two dollars at any hotel. That's the way members of the army. They are eating. Although we have a large detachment here and cannot serve dishes like pies, etc., yet we have very good cats. For instance, night before last we had beefsteak and French fried potatoes. Not so bad?

"Now here is something you may not believe. One can buy anything with soap over here. Rowlands bought a great big German automatic pistol for five bars of common laundry soap. Most anything that is for sale has a price in terms of money and also in terms of soap. I have been picking up a few souvenirs here and there but I haven't any real good ones yet. As soon as I go shopping down to Coblenz I may pick up a few. A bar of soap can be sold for 8 marks. That is over a dollar in real money. I'll have weird tales to tell when I get back, although I didn't see any fighting.

"The German people are treating us royally. They will give us anything we ask for if they have it or can get it. Most of the people around here do not seem to be strong for the Kaiser. None of them like the French. There seems to be an inborn hatred that exists and will always exist between the French and the Germans. It is a matter of fact that there is considerable friction between the French troops and the civilian population in the territory occupied by the French.

"I got along pretty well with the language here, and anyone that can speak German is right in it now. I act as interpreter for some of the other boys when they go out to see the girls and when we go shopping. Things can also be bought more cheaply if you can bargain with them in their own language. Practically no English is spoken and very little French. Some soldiers can speak a little French but that is about all the French that is known. I am glad that I know as much as I do of the German language. Take it all in all,

I am having a great time. I wouldn't take anything for the experience I am going through. It is an experience that money can't buy and one which many men in this country would give thousands of dollars to go through. "It really is quite a sensation to be in the 3d Army, the army of occupation. The occupation of this part of the Rhine is an historic event of such significance that few people realize its importance. I think that the conclusion of peace, which I think will come soon will mark the beginning of a new epoch in the history of the world—an epoch of peace, eternal, I think. The German people do not think so. They think there must be war every 50 years or so. I think that we will see an era of intense commercial rivalry, the U. S. of course coming out on top in the end. I cannot help but believe, too, that there will be some hard times in the world, not only in Germany, France and England, but also in the United States. The return to civil life of millions of men is bound to upset the industrial equilibrium for a time and during the time when that equilibrium is being regained business is bound to be somewhat tight. I do not think it will take long, however, and in the interim it is to sit tight and await developments.

"I forgot to tell you about the manner in which we got our chickens and turkeys. For Christmas dinner a couple of men (German speaking) took a case or two of soap, some stale white bread, threw it into a Dodge truck and went out into the country. They came back with plenty of chickens and turkeys for the bunch, paying 'as high as' one bar of soap for a chicken and two bars for a turkey!

Ernest A. Muenchow.

Ernest A. Muenchow, somewhere in France, has written to his brother, G. W. Muenchow, telling the different places he has been in since he has been in France. His letter follows:

Dec. 5, 1918.

About six and one-half months ago I arrived in France. We left Hoboken, N. J. May 15, at four o'clock and arrived on the morning of May 24 at Brest. We layed in the harbor until May 26, and then unloaded at Brest and marched about three miles where we camped in tents for about four days. Then we got on a train at Brest and went up to the British sector. We got off the train at Orlmont. It was some ride, 4 or 50 of us in a box car about the size of our old street cars. It took us nearly three days and nights and we could not even sleep, sitting up, it was so crowded. Our car also had a flat wheel and you know what they are. From Orlmont we went to Bonillonconet, then to Crevecoeur, then to Pont Remy, then to Vignemont then near Angers where we went in to the front line for the first time at Villiers Breteraux with the Australians. The towns mentioned above before going into the lines we did our training. We were in the trenches about two weeks then we moved over to the Albert front and held the first line which was all German trenches. We were here about two weeks. From here we went back to Amiens where we took the box cars again, only 17 this time to a car which made it lots more comfortable. We went through Vailans, passing through the town of Vailans, then to Thierri, Bernay and lots of other large places. This trip took us a little over two days. From Vailans we took a train and stopped at four, from here we hiked to Brestille where the line started the big drive which ended the war. It started September 26 and at first we were in reserve and then relieved troops in front of us until we held the front line. We saw some fighting in the Argonne woods and Meuse river. From here we went to the front at Conservoy where things are pretty exciting. Then through Verdun as it is called the underground town as it is all foris and people live in dugouts under their places. When the guns ceased firing we were near Remy just making another big rush. Since we are out of the lines we stop at different villages for a week or so.

Ernest Muenchow.

APOLLO.

Arden Quartet.

Four bright, wholesome young American girls who present a musical entertainment full of happiness and artistry. This will partly describe the Arden Entertainers, who appear on the Lyceum course at the Apollo tomorrow.

The Ardens are one of the new companies presented by the Redpath bureau and wherever they have appeared it is said that they have completely pleased their audiences. They are real entertainers and bring to their work an enthusiasm which cannot help but please.

A special feature of their program is the part given up to the interpretation of the moods and music of Hawaii. Although rather tardily recognized, Hawaiian music has become deservedly popular in every part of the country, and in presenting this sketch the Ardens are right up to the minute.

In this part of the program the four young ladies appear on the platform in the native Hawaiian dress and each of the entertainers plays the ukulele. The music of this particular island instrument, with its plaintive tones mingled with the singing of Hawaiian songs, produces an effect which is most pleasing.

A program which is built for entertainment is greatly enriched by clever impersonations on the part of the mezzo soprano. These impersonations are well chosen and abound in humor.

A program to be enjoyable should be possessed of variety. The Arden program has a universal appeal and it is safe to wager that there will be no pulling of "ingersoll" during the presentation of this entertainment.

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

Geraldine Farrar's experience in Goldwyn pictures is requiring with each succeeding production something new of her. And she invariably makes the discovery before anybody else that she is doing something she has never done before. It may be only a little thing or it may be an entire role—like "The Hell Cat," for instance.

In her newest Goldwyn picture, "Shadows," she is a mother. That is not unusual for the stage star, and even in motion pictures some stars are wise enough to realize that the most powerful emotions of the human heart are usually centered in motherhood. But never before had Geraldine Farrar chosen such a role.

"Shadows" is a picture that no actress could call herself finished until she had mastered the art of portraying mother love. Miss Farrar said in the course of the production, "and so I welcome this opportunity to make an attempt on the screen. I am never content to go on doing what I have always done. I must have roles new and different before I must do more of myself constantly. Otherwise acting becomes only routine."

"The idea held by some actresses that they must eternally appear as girls untouched by life's experiences is wrong, in my opinion. It is only by trying to depict every emotion that the artist broadens herself spiritually. One has only to remember that great play, 'Madame X,' or Margaret Anglin in 'The Awakening of Helen Richlie' to know that mother love or the love of a woman for a child is a tremendous force in life. And we are trying to mirror life, so why not all its phases?"

Geraldine Farrar.

Christmas when visitors were present, she jumped up and said: "Oh, I must show you the beautiful Christmas present Sidney is going to give me." Mr. Drew's face fell and he glanced at her disapprovingly. "How can you prevaricate so, Lucile, I have not even purchased it yet," he remonstrated. "Why, yes, you have and it's just too lovely for words," she answered, while she tugged at an enormous partyboard box. She drew forth a hat that was so covered with choice birds of paradise trimming that it was difficult to see the hat frame at all. It was $250. Mrs. Drew explained in an undertone to

"JUST A WOMAN"

With CHARLOTTE WALKER

It is an excellent adaptation of Eugene Walter's great stage success with Charlotte Walker, who created the now famous character of "The Woman" in the spoken drama, giving a magnificent interpretation of the same role on the screen. "JUST A WOMAN" shows the struggle of a lowly placed, but spiritually developed woman to raise her husband to a commanding position in the world, and her fight to retain his love for herself and their son when his old weakness—drink—and other evil influences which came with wealth, made him forget his better self so that he outrages all of her finer sensibilities.

IRENE CASTLE TO WED

According to a report in the New York Herald, Mrs. Vernon Castle is engaged to be married. Her fiancé is said to be Tom Powers, a Royal Flying Corps pilot now appearing in "Oh Boy!" in London.

Powers was a friend of the late Captain Vernon Castle and it was under the instructions of the latter that Powers learned to fly.

Mrs. Castle was a surprise to Mrs. Castle's mother, Mrs. Elroy Foote, that her daughter was reported engaged.

BRIEF BITS

Allan Holubar, husband of Dorothy Phillips, was taken suddenly ill on their return last week in California after a few weeks' vacation in New York. Reports indicate that his condition is serious.

When Peggy Hyland is not busy at the studios at Hollywood she spends her time breeding birds. At present she has twenty-two canaries, fourteen cockatoos, six parrots and sixty prize carrier pigeons.

A WOMAN'S BUSINESS

BY ZOE BECKLEY

"SHALL I TELL?"

It is an odd thing how a person can go about, never thinking of certain problems and conditions that seem commonly enough to confront others and give them trouble. But once your attention is called to it and some one tells you of that particular problem or condition, you immediately stumble over it and wonder how you were always running across it.

So it was with Janet Stedman. After poor little Millie had enlightened her regarding the "posters" of the gentleman named Prader, who the "skunk" and "akunk," Janet seemed always to be encountering human animals of that disagreeable type. Now that her eyes were opened, she saw them on the streets and in cars. She noted them in offices.

And at last, as if fate took an inhuman delight in forcing her to believe that which she had always doubted, Janet was confronted with a problem.

Walt had gone out one evening to a dinner of advertising men. By a coincidence, what happened to her was almost identical. Roy Nicoll came by in his car "to take the misses and the old man joy riding." He had not been around since the evening Walt had stopped her abruptly and stopped their innocent and unpremeditated dinner excursion.

Janet explained that her husband was out for the evening, but was nothing loath to buy her a drink. He was, in fact, Roy Nicoll's instant bid that she "come along anyhow." They sped up Boulevard Lafayette, that took on a fairylike beauty in the waxy moonlight that silvered the dark, cast dense shadows where the hills rose close to the road on the land side.

Nicoll was less talkative than usual. Janet, glad enough to have a word with her own thoughts for company, smuggled into the warm robes, and lapsed into purring content. She was thinking, as she thought much lately, of Millie and the "skunk" and other girls like Millie, who had no education, no equipment, not at home life, no wise example to follow, no anything but the pitiful pleasures they bought so dearly.

She was recalled by a gradual slowing up of the car. They were no longer beside the river, but on a dark road over which the bare trees met. The moon had gone behind clouds. Janet looked quickly at the man beside her, who looked steadily back at her. It seemed in the dimness that he was smiling. "What's wrong, anything the matter?" asked Janet, puzzled. It was not like Nicoll to stop. He usually wouldn't go even slowly.

"Nope," he answered cheerfully. "I just stopped. Politely talking. Got a fit of blues tonight, I guess. Ever have the blues?"

"Course I do; everybody does," returned Janet lightly, but with a sudden in her mind for an explanation of Roy's strange manner. "What's troubling you?"

"Oh—loneliness. What's the use of it all, anyhow? Nobody cares except for the money I spend. I croaked nobody but my valet would give a darn and he'd soon get over it. There isn't a soul—"

"Roy Nicoll stop this instantly!" cried Janet angrily. "You've gone crazy."

What happened then was so swift and so amazing that Janet scarcely could recall it afterward except with a sort of blind, groping sense. She felt her wrists suddenly caught in an unshakable grip, and herself drawn helplessly against her companion. In an instant, Janet was being kissed. She sat back to avoid the kiss, but he was smiling. "You're a beautiful girl," he said. "I don't know what I ought to be hanged! I don't know what I ought to be hanged!"

She sat back to avoid the kiss, but he was smiling. "You're a beautiful girl," he said. "I don't know what I ought to be hanged! I don't know what I ought to be hanged!"

HEALTH TALKS

THE HOT AIR FURNACE

With steam or hot water heating, through radiators placed in the living rooms, the most efficient and economical results are obtained by preventing ventilation of the living rooms. The air is heated by radiation and reheated over and over again. The warm air of the steam or hot water radiators warms over air in such the same way as the fellow who covers his head with the blanket in bed.

The hot air furnace gives the most efficient and economical results when ample provision is made, not only for admitting fresh air from the outside but also for carrying away the used or vitiated air from the upper part of the house.

In many households where there is a constant warfare with the furnace, the whole trouble is that no provision is made for an outlet for the used air near the roof.

The one important objection to heating with hot air furnaces is the excessive dryness of the air in apartments. But this dryness, which may equal or exceed the dryness of desert air in a room heated above 65 degrees Fahrenheit in cold weather, is not a serious matter in a furnace heating. It is quite as objectionable in apartments heated by steam or hot water radiators.

All sorts of water evaporators are steam or hot air radiators for the purpose of increasing the humidity of the air, but they are not as effective as a few gallons of water in a day, whereas it is necessary to evaporate thirty to sixty gallons in the average house in order to maintain a reasonable degree of humidity when the air is heated up to 70 or more degrees. This problem of humidity will regulate itself if the heating is not excessive.

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been married a year. My husband, I have found to my dismay, is just a common brute.

He has struck me twice. I am an orphan and have no one to go to for advice. I have not known a mother's love and care since I was twelve.

I was just a working girl, with no education to speak of, clerking in a store. I was paid $7 a week when I met him. I only knew him a few months when we were married.

I have done things in my past that I am truly sorry for and trying to atone for, but I told my husband about those things before we were married. Then he told me some of his life before we met and we agreed that we would never tell each other anything that would hurt the other. I wanted to marry him. I will admit I did not care for him at the time, but I wanted a home like other women have.

I have been a true wife and have learned to love him, but his treatment has caused me to dislike him almost. Every time he gets angry he casts up those things I did before we met. He has told me repeatedly to get out—that I just had a trunk when he married me and to take it and go.

Once when he was in a good humor he told me he loved me better than any other woman and that he just told me to go because he thought that would hurt me worse than anything he could say. He told me that again, not less than four times in two weeks. I never told him that, for I am afraid of him.

I have told him that his friends often in our home that he would not want to go other places. Do you think I did right?

Shall I leave my pretty home and go back to seven dollars a week or can you suggest some other way? He does not want children. He says he never liked them. He asked his mother to allow me to board a little tot or orphan, but he would not hear of it. Ours was not a slacker marriage because we were classified before we were married.

He is home every night. Do you think we see too much of each other? Should I go away for a visit for a few weeks and see if I can't get a better man? I am afraid to walk out for fear he will sell the furniture. He will do anything when he is angry. He has lovely parents, but I could never go to them for help. He has a car and a house. Most trouble that married women have with their husbands is caused by fear. You are entitled to your home and everything that is in it just as much as your husband and in case you left him the court would see that you had a just settlement.

Your husband does love you or he would not stay home so faithfully. You have quick eyes and a good sense of making home pleasant for him and entertaining his friends. If he thought he would lose you, he would be more careful of the way he treated you.

The next time he strikes you and tells you to go, do so. Since you love children you would be a good nurse for them and could make as much money as they are making clerking, and would have a home besides. Probably he would promise anything to get you back. But in case your separation proved permanent your situation would at least be better than in the home of a brute.

It would probably help temporarily to go away on a visit for a few weeks now.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I was engaged to a young man and had an engagement ring. Now he has asked me to return the ring. I was a very pretty girl and the only one I own. Since he was to blame, don't you think I am entitled to keep the ring?

It is etiquette, when an engagement is broken, for the girl to return the ring. I think you should do so.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: When a young man takes a girl out in the evening and they have to go in a street car, who should get off the car first, the man or the girl? FANNY.

"The man should get off first and help the girl to alight."

Something No Girl Wants.

The only way to break a young girl of the pickle-eating habit is to tell her candidly that if she continues it she will have a red nose, which is something that no girl wants.—New Orleans States.

A Guide to GOOD MANNERS

By Janice

A hostess always rises to receive an introduction to either a man or woman. A woman, however, if a guest at some large function like a dinner, tea or ball does not rise when a man is presented to her nor when she is introduced to a group to which a woman is introduced.

A woman always rises to meet a person of distinction or an elderly person or to receive another woman. If seated beside the hostess a woman usually rises when the hostess does.

But if a young man is introduced, he always rises when any introduction takes place in which he has a part, it matters not whether the other person be man or woman, old or young.

Household Hints

MENU HINT.

Breakfast. Stewed Apples. Toast. Coffee.

Lunch. Boiled Hominy with Milk or Sugar. Tomato Soup. Crackers. Waldorf Salad. Cocoa. Bread and Peanut Butter. Mashed Potatoes. Brown Gravy. Stewed Squash. Cucumber Pickles. Sweet French Rolls and Butter. Lemon Jelly with Whipped Cream. Coffee.

TESTED RECIPES.

Waldorf Salad—Chop equal quantities of apples, celery and nuts. Mix with mayonnaise and serve on lettuce or parsley.

Sweet French Rolls—One cup milk, one yeast cake dissolved in one-quarter cup lukewarm water, one-quarter cup sugar, one teaspoon salt, one egg and yolk of another, one-eighth teaspoon mace, one-quarter cup melted butter substitute. Scald milk. When lukewarm add dissolved yeast cake and one and one-half cups flour; beat well, cover, and let rise until light; add sugar, salt, eggs well beaten, mace and butter. Knead in pan close together for five minutes. Roll into long strips, spread with oleo, roll up like jelly roll and cut in one-inch pieces. Place pieces in pan close together for five minutes. Bake in a moderate oven.

Plain Fritters—Beat two eggs without separating them, until light. Add one cupful of milk, a half teaspoonful of salt, and sufficient flour to make one and one-half cupfuls to make a thin batter. Beat well; add two level teaspoonfuls of baking powder; beat again, and drop by tablespoonfuls in hot oil. When brown on one side, turn and brown the other. Serve with powdered sugar.

Candlelight Supper—Select a small tenderloin steak having the size of your chafing dish in mind and cook on the stove as about at the last minute laying in the warm chafin. Surround with smallish cut potatoes fried to a golden brown. Plain table and linen doilies, candlelight and remonioses. Cheese strips, salines and coffee.

Sandwiches and Tea—Just a hurried reminder that you can make in fifty and then turn your books around. Simply trim bread, nice and moist, the edges trimmed and thrown into the "crumb" jar for breadings at some other time. Butter the bread after cutting in strips and fill with cream cheese, tender with a little peanut butter. Have a tiny bowl of pickles, pickles to nibble. Orange Pekoe tea, plenty of sugar and a slice of lemon.

It is etiquette, when an engagement is broken, for the girl to return the ring. I think you should do so.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: When a young man takes a girl out in the evening and they have to go in a street car, who should get off the car first, the man or the girl? FANNY.

"The man should get off first and help the girl to alight."

Something No Girl Wants.

The only way to break a young girl of the pickle-eating habit is to tell her candidly that if she continues it she will have a red nose, which is something that no girl wants.—New Orleans States.

SIDE TALKS

—BY— RUTH CAMERON

A REMINDER.

A friend asked me the other day, in the course of a heart to heart talk, whether I had kept silence at a certain time because a request she had made had offended me.

"Indeed," I started to say, and then I stopped and tried to remember and analyze just what I had felt.

I had experienced a momentary annoyance when she made the request, but I could not think of "What non-sense she has a perfect right to make it," and had tried to put the annoyance behind me. And then I had wondered what she had the right to ask and had tried to start up the conversation again, but finding that hard, had let it go after all.

I wasn't sure that I wasn't annoyed.

Had there been some modicum of annoyance in my attitude after all? I was not quite sure there was not, so all I could honestly answer her was, "I don't know."

But if I was, it was nonsense and I'm not now.

"Now that was a question of my own motive. If anyone could possibly know what it was, it was not I. And I hadn't been able to be sure."

Doubtless you see the corollary.

Fur Trimmed Gown Looks Like a Suit

This smart afternoon gown, which cannot conceal the fact that it is a Paris inspiration, has every appearance of a suit with its soft taupe fox collar, cuffs and skirt bands. Large fashioning of the skirt and bodice with a straight satin panel from the low neck to the top row of fur on the skirt. Satin covered buttons edge both sides of the panel. The hat is a model worthy of note, being made of the same material as the gown and absolutely devoid of trimming.

The Daily Novelette

DID SHE MEAN TO DO IT?

Football isn't the word. It was even worse than that. There was the rotten and decayed lattice almost covered with roses leading up to a stone balcony, and yet the man climbed up the lattice.

He was dressed in a velvet suit with knickerbockers and a long velvet cloak—a leather on his head and a guitar or lute or harp or something in his hand. The thing looked like a man-doll.

As some of our learned readers have already guessed from this accurate description, the man was Romeo.

Juliet, hearing the creaking and crunching of the woodwork and the muttering of words, saw the shadow of Romeo's hands and clothes, glided out on the balcony and threw a rose full in Romeo's face. "Romeo! Romeo! Why/riestest thou thyself on your rotten lattice? What wouldst little Juliet do without her dear tummy, heh?"

"Huh! I should worry!" laughed Romeo, as he threw himself and his mandolin up to the fence around the balcony. "I just got an accident policy yesterday for ten thousand francs if I—"

But Romeo never finished it. "Gwan!" laughed Juliet, and she gave Romeo a coquettish but hardish push off the balcony, and he accidentally fell on the stone paving below.

"Steath!" he cried, as he was going down.

CALUMET BAKING POWDER SAVES THREE WAYS

—A moderate priced Baking Powder of greatest merit. Honestly made. Honestly sold. Economical in every way. Every particle is full of actual leavening value. A full money's worth.

—You save time when you use it. Calumet is all baking powder. It begins to raise bakings the instant they are put into the oven. You don't have to keep "peeping" to see if bakings are all right. You know they are. Calumet is sure—never fails. That's economy. And true economy—in cost—in use—in time.

One trial will prove it and show you in results why millions of shrewd, thrifty housewives prefer Calumet to all other brands.

The unflinching strength of Calumet guarantees perfect results. Not only saves flour—sugar—eggs, etc.—but saves Baking Powder. You use only a teaspoonful—you use two teaspoonfuls or more of most other brands.

TIPPECANOE

Being a True Chronicle of Certain Passages Between DAVID LAWRENCE and ANTOINETTE DUBANNON of the Indiana Wilderness, and of What Befell Thereafter in Old Corydon and now first set forth by SAMUEL MCCOY

Illustrations by DeAlton Valentine.

CHAPTER VII.

The Course of True Love.

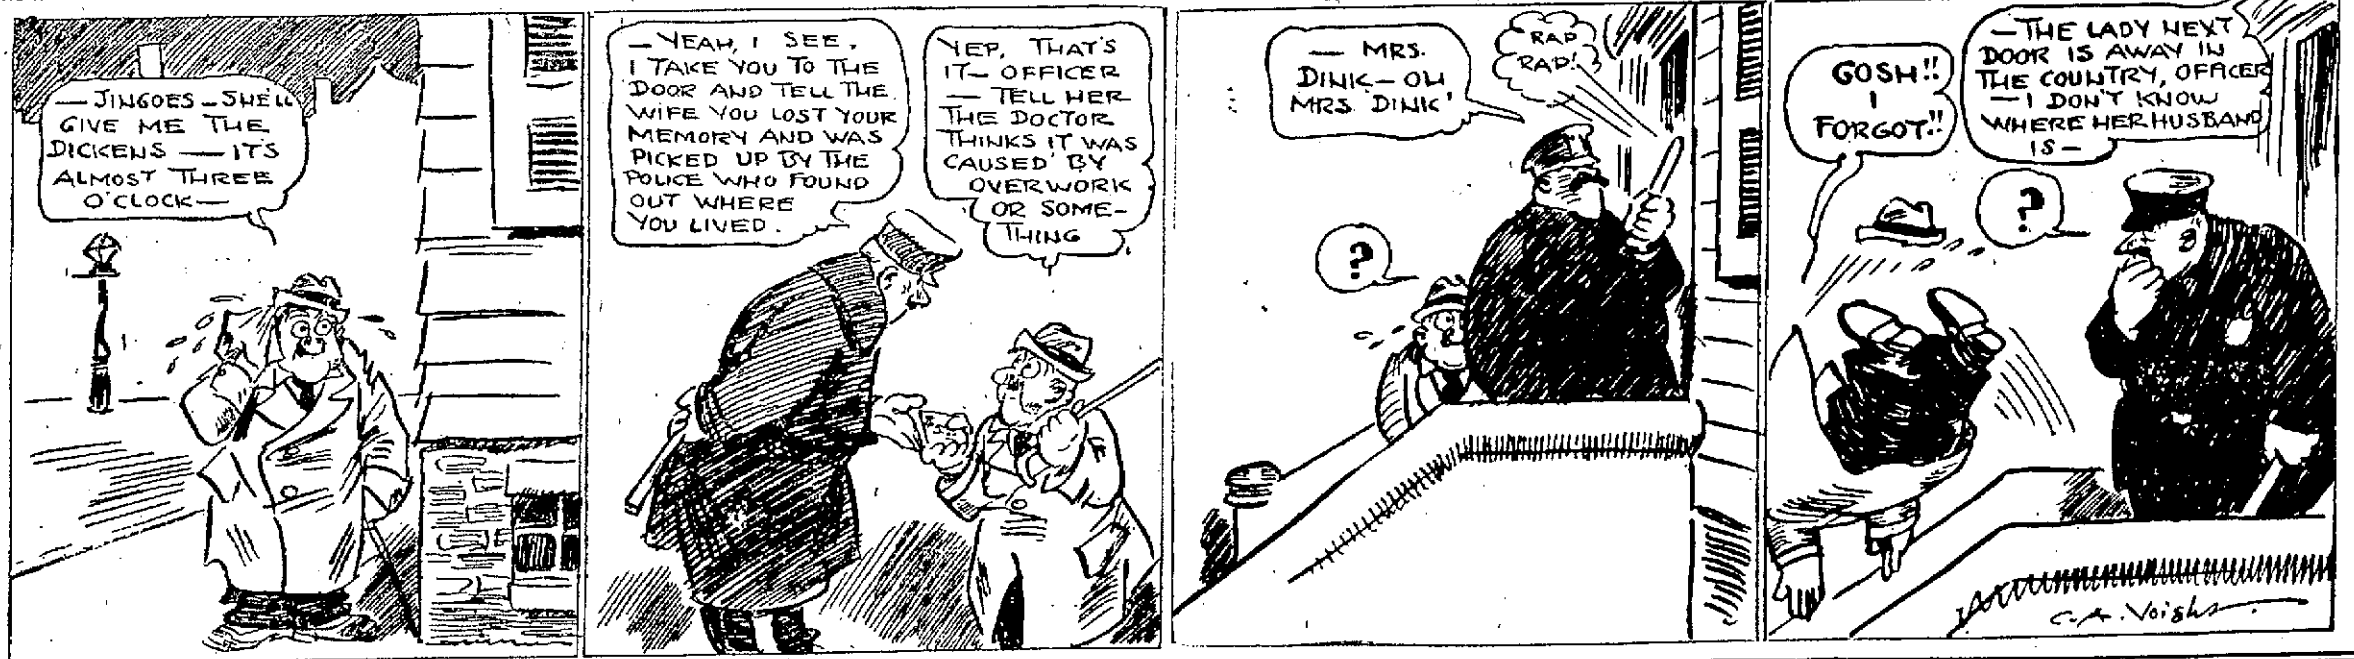

Corydon lay baking under the sun of August. Along the parched ground the waves of heat, the "lazy" Lawrence, danced maddeningly. Toinette was rejoicing in the arrival of a great box from New Orleans—sent by flatboat to Louisville, hauled thence, on a clumsy oak-runner sledge, jolted slowly over the rutty road, by the patient oxen. Toinette cried out rapturously as she drew forth from the great chest walking dresses of white Jaconet mullin; a China robe of India twill; a preposterously inadequate cloak of sarsenet silk; tiny slippers of white kid and rose-colored silk and a precious packet containing a ferroniere, a headband of flat gold links with a great pendant of pearls hanging from its clasp down on the forehead. It was Patrice's birthday gift for his daughter, ordered through an old friend in New Orleans.

There were to be two weddings in town that morning—the weekly newspaper put it. Mr. Philip Bell was to marry the agreeable Miss Rachel Harbison and Mr. Isham Stroud the agreeable Miss Patsy Sands—and Toinette vacillated deliciously in her choice of a costume to grace the two occasions.

The wedding over, she made her way home in her silken slippers, swathed herself in an apron and prepared their dinner. David had not been at either wedding. She was thinking of him as she busied herself at the hearth and old Patrice read happily from his beloved "Arcadia." She drew the flat board on which the cornmeal had been baked to golden-brown from the fire, set the roasted wild turkey on the table, pushed back a flying lock of hair from her flushed face, and roused her father from his book. It was her happiest birthday feast in the new land.

In the evening the old gentleman jogged off on horseback to General Harrison's farm, to pay his respects and be served with a glass of Madeira. Toinette preferred to remain at home—Mr. Blackford would call, perhaps David as well. She finished her work and sat down to amuse herself with some embroidery, a candle made of the wax of the myrtle berry throwing its light upon her flying fingers. The summer dusk fell rapidly around her. The night closed in, heavy, warm, full of sleepy sounds of bird and insect. Someone's feet at the doorstep, a hand rapped at the door. Toinette lifted the latchpin. It was David.

She swept him a curtsy. One of the functions of woman's dress is to snatch a man out of his dull shufflings upon earth and show him a world glorified. That function was performed in this case. David saw Madame Recamier (he had heard of such a person) curtsying to him in the house of Patrice O'Bannon. Madame Recamier spoke, and lo! it was Toinette.

"Why don't you say how you like it?"

It was evidently the gown of cobwebs that was meant.

"Exceedingly well. Excuse my asking, but is that all of it?"

"Imbecile! The latest from Paris! It's too bad to waste it on you."

"Well, well!" David pretended a dry indifference.

Toinette turned up her nose. "Why weren't you at the wedding?"

"Couldn't. I was off on a hunt."

"Lucky?"

"No—only a couple of deer."

"The brides were sweet."

She sat down at her needlework once more and David, seated in the dimly lighted room, his high linen collarband gleaming palely between his dark face and the somber blacks of his cravat and his coat, watched her in silence. When he spoke it was to introduce a new subject:

"Congress has voted to increase the army by twenty-five thousand men."

he said abruptly, "and has provided for the enlistment of fifty thousand volunteers in addition."

She let her hands fall to her lap. "Does that mean war is sure?"

"Not yet. But they talk of it freely. England will yield to none of our requests."

She smiled proudly to herself at his use of the word "our." He went on with his news:

"Mr. Clay wants a stronger navy. Curious—isn't it?—that Kentucky should be in harmony with the seaboard states in this."

"Yes—they called us 'the wild men of the Ohio' last winter."

He smiled at her flash of resentment. "Are you still as eager for war as you were once?"

Toinette shuddered. It was unnecessary to reply to the thrust.

David went on evenly:

"Well, the whole time of the congress is taken up with the debates. Things are at a breaking point. The president seems likely to get what his message asked for in the way of timber for shipbuild—Toinette, look at me!"

She looked up, startled at the change in his voice, and saw what she had feared—and vaguely longed for—was about to come. David had risen to his feet. The room seemed suddenly filled with a tremendous tension. Her heart beat uncontrollably; she calmly threaded a needle anew.

"Do you know what failure is?" he lunged at her. The torrent of his heart rushed out with the words, "I have struggled," he said harshly, "but I give up now. I work from daylight to dark, I read at night at the law. I weary myself with arguing with the Blackfords. These things ought to make up my world for me. But they don't. There isn't any world for me unless you—" He checked himself, then began anew. "I think about myself. I go back over my life—all its poverty—every miserable line of its starved existence. And then—I think about you. I want to know what right you have to make part of my world. It's not your world. It doesn't belong there. Why do you come into mine? You ought not to be in my thoughts. But you are. I can't drive you out of my mind. You have been there ever since I first saw you, ever since . . ."

His voice broke.

From the first wild challenge of his gaze she had averted her face and had listened with bowed head. As he paused she threw a frightened glance at him and saw that the knuckles of his clenched hands were whitened with the strain. She tried to speak but could think of nothing that she could say. Her hands picked aimlessly at the threads in her lap. After a moment he regained control of his lips and went on, passionately pleading that softened his words:

"I have been trying to believe that I could conquer all this in myself—that it was too preposterous to endure. But instead of that it has grown stronger . . ."

It is now everything. You are in everything I do. I cannot keep silent. . . .

"Exactly" what do you want, David? . . .

He was wounded to the heart. For a moment the hurt look in his eyes, struck her with pity. But she steeled herself and went on:

"I'm afraid I don't know just what you're talking about. Do you mean that I am wronging you in any way?"

A wave of hot anger swept through him that she could choose to adopt so pitiful a misconception. But the girl was fighting with the weapons of her sex, fighting to regain control of the situation. He stood very proudly, waiting to give her an opportunity to retract.

"If I have offended you . . ."

"I have made a mistake," he said laughingly. "I see that I have been ridiculous."

She shot a frightened glance at him. Had she gone too far? She forced herself to go on, still clinging to her makeshift armor, still hiding behind her poor little defenses:

"Can you think that I do not realize how hard life is up here on the frontier? It calls for all that is best and bravest in us to go on fighting against heat and cold and hunger, actual want. But it takes strong men—men who endure and do not complain."

"Do you think I am whining? You know I am not." He waved her words aside impatiently. "It is something else."

He stopped, impotent to advance in the face of the travesty of his passion she had thrown in his path.

The room was very still. Outdoors the crickets chirped unceasingly. For a long while they stood facing each other in silence that rested more and more heavily upon David's heart.

Toinette raised her eyes timidly. David's look had not changed; it seemed to enfold her with a mighty passion of wounded love, proud, suffering, pleading to be understood. She spoke again, falteringly:

"We shall always be friends, shall we not?"

There was no answer. She waited, not daring to raise her eyes from the ground. She heard him move slowly across the room, heard the latch lifted and the door opened; heard his deep, grave voice saying goodby, as in a dream; heard the door close.

There swept over her the realization of all that he had suffered and risked for her, all the fine manliness that lifted him above the poverty of his life. The silent room seemed to accuse her with a hundred inscrutable eyes. He had laid bare his love for her and she had dragged it in the dust of petty things. She stretched her hands out yearningly.

"David!" she called.

The room mocked her with its silence.

He was gone.

CHAPTER VIII.

Fear.

David went back to his dress-stuffs by day and his law books by night with a heavy heart. The days dragged by as slowly as they pass the beds of the sick, feverishly hot, inexplicably hostile; till at last he welcomed the necessity of a journey to replenish his stock of goods. Colonel Posey had once more postponed his return to Corydon and had asked David to buy whatever was needed to carry on the business. His supplies were to be ferried across the river from Louisville to Clarksville; and setting off at dawn one morning, he strode all day long through the silent woods. The sun was going down when he left the road, panted to the top of the Silver hills and flung himself down on the ground. Away to the south stretched the broad and majestic current of the Ohio till it passed out of sight among the blue hills of Kentucky; below him, in the lengthening shadows of the evening, rose the slender columns of smoke from the cabin chimneys of Clarksville, a cluster of a dozen or so log farmhouses. Beyond, across the rushing waters of the Falls, he could distinguish the roofs of Louisville, bright in the sunset light.

He looked his fill upon the broad expanse of the great river—the beautiful river, as the Indians called it—its hurrying, tumultuous waters, the fatboat ferry, slowly crawling across, the green shores beyond—and then scrambled down the steep hillside to the village, where the smokes of kitchen fires sent up their friendly signals. At the inn where he rested that night the tavern-keeper indicated a deserted cabin that stood near the river bank.

"That's the cabin whar General George Rogers Clark used to live—pore old critter!"

"He's not dead, is he?"

"Eim dead? Ye kin't kill him with a ax. I seed him ristaday, over yam"—waving toward Louisville—"pore old critter—driv the Britshers outen these parts thirty year gone, an' sets thar cross the river withouten a f'opence."

David heard him listlessly. His goods had arrived and were piled in the tavern kennel; and as he turned toward the shack to see that they were in readiness for the homeward journey in the morning, he heard his name called by a girl's voice.

The Best Cough Syrup Is Home-made

Here's an easy way to save 25¢ and you have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? When you do, you will understand why thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but it earns a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and a dollar's worth of satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Dandruff Heads Become Hairless

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

"RED" CONNELL AND CASSERLY SIGN UP FOR ELGIN CONTEST

Former Beloit High School Star and Olympic Club Forward Will be Seen in Card Uniforms Tomorrow Night.

D. R. Connell, star of Beloit high school in days of yore, will be seen in action in a Lakota Cardinal suit at the armory tomorrow evening when the Cards clash with the Elgins of Elgin, Ill. in their third game of the season. "Red" in his belated high school days was probably the best guard Beloit ever had and his decision to appear with the Cards greatly strengthens their defensive line. He will probably be pitted against "Barefoot" Adams. Murphy is slated to be "Red's" running-mate and if his eyesight is only in good shape so he can see something else besides the basket, they should make a fast pair of guards. Phillips will be seen holding down the pivot position while Hemming will perform at one forward. Through the efforts of the management, Casserly, Madison Olympic club star, has been secured to hold down the other forward position. Casserly showed great speed in his game against the Cards here last Wednesday night and should prove a valuable addition to the strength of the local aggregation. Tilley and Cushing will be in suits but will not start the game. With this array of old stars all hope points to a Card victory. However, Elgin has a strong bunch and a hot game is anticipated. The invaders are headed by "Barefoot" Adams. Ward received today from "Moosey" Patton indicates that he will be in a Card suit against the Y. M. O's February 19. His appearance on the local floor again is looked forward to by basketball fans in the city.

ROST AND HALL WIN; POOL TOURNEY OPENS

Rost defeated Bliss 50 to 38, and Tinsford forfeited to Hall, in two scheduled "billiard" tournaments, tonight. Rost showed good form and after letting his opponent pile up a score suddenly took a spurt and ran off his 50 points. In the pool tournament the opening games of which were played last night, Delton Amerophl defeated Howard Hall 50 to 25 and Karl Decker outscored F. McCue 50 to 20. Two more games in both tournaments are scheduled to be played tonight.

CHAMPIONSHIP OF CHURCH LEAGUE WILL BE DECIDED TONIGHT

Congregational, League Leaders, Will Fight It Out for Honors at Y. M. C. A. Alters.

Church League Bowling Standings.
Congregational	W. 0 1,000
Baptist	4 0 1,000
Lutheran	4 2 667
Christian	4 3 500
Methodist	4 3 250
Episcopal	1 3 250
Presbyterian	0 6 000

In the climax game of the first round of the church league bowling tournament, the Baptists and Congregationalists will fight it out for honors at the "Y" alleys tonight. Neither team has lost a game this year and both are leading the league with four games each. On the result of tonight's game hinges the championship of the tournament. All hope seems to point to a Cong victory, but it would be no surprise to fans to see the Baptists upset the dope and come through with a win. As a result of their failure to appear at the alleys last night, the Presbyterians are now holding down the lowest berth in the church league with six defeats and no victories. They were scheduled to meet the Episcopal aggregation last evening, but failed to show up, so a defeat by forfeit was chalked up against them.

BADGERS VS. CHICAGO AT MADISON, SATURDAY

Madison, Jan. 28.—After their disastrous defeat at the hands of Illinois Saturday, the Badgers are out to polish up their record by a win over Chicago at Madison next Saturday night. The Maroons come to this city with a record of three victories and no defeat, so they have found the going easy but Wisconsin may prove a stumbling block. The Badgers showed up strong in practice last night. Perfecting their teamwork will be the main object worked for this week as a noticeable lack of working together was shown in the contest with the Suckers Saturday. Knapp is the only man who came through that fray without a scratch but the rest of the men are rapidly rounding into shape for the Maroon battle.

Evansville News

Evansville, Jan. 28.—Among the out of town people in attendance at the funeral of the late Mrs. Locke Pierce were her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Conners, of Evansville, Mr. and Mrs. George Porter, Mrs. Eugene Olin, John and Arthur Francis of Janesville, Plavus Pierce, Miss Maud Pierce, Stoughton, Mrs. Julia Rolfe, Milwaukee; Mrs. Florence Pierce and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Lon Pierce, Rockford; Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Danks, Oregon; and Owen Rolfe of Oshkosh. The remains of the late Edward Logan, who died Friday following a brief illness with pneumonia, were taken to Ft. Atkinson Monday morning for burial. Mr. and Mrs. Logan and three children bought the Patterson farm south of town and came here in November to reside. They had been here but three days when their daughter died, and now the father has followed. The mother is very ill at the home at present.

Supt. J. F. Waddell was called to Twin Bluffs early yesterday morning by the death of his sister, Mrs. Harold Scheurman. She leaves a husband and three small children.

Mrs. Ezra Childen is very ill at her home on East Main street. Dr. Fennor of Janesville was called in counsel Saturday.

Mrs. Joseph West and daughters, Mesdames Agnes Smith and Klittie Sizemore, have returned from a visit in Oshkosh.

Miss Ada Curless has accepted the position of clerk in the telephone office.

Fred Johnson who has been very ill at his home on Church street, is now so much improved that he is able to be out of his sick room.

Ben Ely who has been very ill, is now slowly improving.

Mrs. Winifred Allen spent the week end with her parents here.

Mrs. Theodore Dandiker, of Milwaukee, is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Johnson.

Miss Ethel Van Wort has returned to her school duties in Brodhead.

Mrs. Burr Tolles, phone 344 private phone, represents the Gazette in Evansville. Franklin Clifford has charge of the carrier routes. Orders for subscriptions, and service complaints should be phoned to him.

JAWN MAY RETIRE AS FIELD MANAGER

John McGraw.

The recent change in ownership of the Giants has brought up the rumor that Juggsy McGraw may retire as active field manager of the team. Under the new regime McGraw becomes a big stockholder although retained as manager. Pat Moran, until recently manager of the Phillies, was engaged as coach of the Giants before the change in ownership. It is possible now that Moran may be the active manager. McGraw confining his time to the general policies of the club and the makeup of the team.

VALUE OF LIVESTOCK IN STATE $30,000,000 MORE THAN YEAR AGO

Madison, Wis., Jan. 28.—The total value of livestock on Wisconsin farms on January 1 is estimated to be $34,600,000 compared with $33,600,000 for a year ago, according to the report of Field Agent Joseph A. Becker of the Cooperative Crop Reporting Service for Wisconsin (U. S. Bureau of Crop Estimates and State Department of Agriculture).

All classes of livestock except horses and mules increased in number during the year. In general this is due to increased prices received for all livestock products during the year. The large crop production of 1918 made it necessary for farmers to dispose of their stock because of a scarcity of feed. This increase in numbers occurred in spite of the fact that more than the ordinary marketing of animals for slaughter occurred during the year.

Horses decreased 2 per cent in number, from 108,000 on January 1, 1918 to 104,000 this year. The average value per head of horses of all ages also decreased ($117 in 1918 to $109 in 1919).

Milk cows decreased 1 per cent in number, 1,503,000 in 1918, compared with 1,485,000 last year. There were slight decreases in some southern and eastern countries, while marked increases occurred in northern Wisconsin. The average value of milk cows is estimated at $82 this year compared with $75 a year ago.

Other cattle, comprising dairy heifers and cowboys, increased 3 per cent, from 1,394,000 last year to 1,436,000 this year. Dairy heifers and calves showed marked increases, while steers and other beef cattle decreased. The average price per head of other cattle of all ages increased from $33.30 to $37.00 during the year.

Sheep showed a very substantial gain of 10 per cent in number (715,000 this year compared to 651,000 last year). The high stable price of wool is causing this class of animals to be kept for shearing. The average value per head increased from $11.50 to $12.40 during the year.

Swine, in spite of heavy marketing for slaughter, increased 5 per cent in number from 2,012,000 last year to 2,121,000 this year. The well matured corn crop is permitting farmers to hold their hogs for further increases in weight. Moreover a larger number of fall pigs than ever before are on the farms of the state. The average value of swine of all ages is estimated at $2.50 compared with $2.30 a year ago.
